

National Labor Policy

May1, 2013

Written by Presidency Staff

The Presidency's Editorial Staff

The Government's commitment is to enforce the constitutional right to decent, socially useful work; to this end, it is promoting a labor policy supported by four lines of action:

First. Promote the creation of formal quality jobs.

The State's efforts are being guided towards creating formal jobs, and facilitating the transition to formal employment.

Second. Democratize productivity.

It is essential to increase the productive capacity of all the regions in the country, all the economic sectors and all the population groups. Democratizing productivity is essential for us to become a fairer, more equitable and inclusive society.

Third. Safeguard workers' rights.

The Mexican State is responsible for preserving the labor rights that workers have achieved throughout history.

Fourth. Keep the peace in work issues.

The government will always be available for dialogue, reconciliation and understanding. Productivity and competitiveness will be achieved in full harmony with workers' fundamental rights. This will keep the routes of labor peace and harmony open.